RZLBD

Atelier RZLBD is a boutique architectural practice based in Toronto founded by the architect Reza Aliabadi; whose work extends to designing buildings & objects, curating installations & expositions, and publishing a zine called rzlbdPOST. The practice is not just an ordinary operation that serves, rather like a positive virus, it contributes, communicates, challenges, and adapts itself to the project and its context.

In recognition of the high quality of the studio's work at a variety of scales, RZLBD has been distinguished with numerous accolades, including the International American Architecture Prize (2017), the City of Markahm Design Excellence Award (2014), and two awards from the Ontario Association of Architects (2009, 2011). RZLBD works have also been exhibited in many venues locally and globally, including the Sir Joan Soane's Museum in London, England (2018), the World Architural festival in Berlin, Germany (2017), and Toronto Harbourfront Centre (2012). The Practice's craft has been celebrated in more than 70 print publications. This coverage includes stories in Architectural Review, MARK, Wallpaper*, the Globe & Mail, Canadian Architect and Canadian Interiors, features in anthologies from international publishing houses Phaidon, Braun, Rizzoli, Harper Collins, and Archiworld, and online articles by ArchDaily, Dezeen, Domus and DesignBoom.

Furthermore, in July, 2017, RZLBD had the significant honour of being selected by Canadian Architect as one of the country's top emerging talents.

In 1999, Reza graduated as a valedictorian from Faculty of Fine Arts, University of Tehran, with a Master's degree in Architecture. After completing a post-professional Master's of Architecture at McGill University in 2006 and obtaining the license to practice in 2010, he started the Atelier Reza Aliabadi "RZLBD" in Toronto. Since then, he has established a strong reputation in both national and international architectural communities. Local and global media have published many of RZLBD's projects. He has been invited to exhibit in galleries and museums, sit at the peer assessment committee of Canada Council for the Art, speak at CBC Radio, give lectures at art and architecture schools and colleges, and be a guest reviewer at design studios. He mentors a handful of talented interns in the Greater Toronto Area; while he maintains an ongoing interest in architectural research in areas such as microarchitecture, housing ideas for the future and other dimensions of urbanism such as compactness and intensification. Beside his architectural practice, Reza also publishes a periodical zine called rzlbdPOST. UK publisher Artifice recently released a monograph, RZLBD Hopscotch, which recognizes the past seven years of Reza's practice by collecting essays, project profiles, and annotated drawings.
